

James Matcham

James Matcham is Head of Early Clinical Development Biometrics in AstraZeneca, where he has led the development of the group to specialise in early clinical trial design, decisions and analysis. After completing his MSc in Statistics at Imperial College, London, he began his career as a Research Fellow at the Applied Statistics Research Unit at the University of Kent, UK where he worked for 5 years. He then completed 21 years at Amgen where he worked on the development and regulatory/reimbursement approval of many of their biotechnology products. James is a Chartered Statistician of the Royal Statistical Society has been a member of UK society for Pharmaceutical Statisticians (PSI) for 30 years, serving on the Scientific and Training Committees as well as the Board of Directors. He has also served on the Professional Affairs Committee of the Royal Statistical Society and the Scientific Committee of the European Federation of Pharmaceutical Statisticians.